

Health and Safety Assessment

Blue Screen Room

Before using the blue screen room and various related facilities, each member of the group attended a mandatory introductory session which outlined the various do's and don'ts related to the studio. During this session we were informed on proper use of the lighting rig and audio equipment. This session stood us all in good stead for when it came to use the studio.

When using the studio we ensured that extra special care was taken with regard to footwear, as by far and away the most expensive asset in the studio is the perfectly flat floor. We were initially anxious about whether the break dancers would be able to operate normally whilst also adhering to the strict H+S rules with regard to the floor. We ensured they wore footwear that would not damage the floor when in use.

We found that we did not really have to reconfigure the lights when shooting our dancers, and as such they were not so much of a health and safety issue.

Using the camera

Before using the camera, each group member attended a workshop we demonstrated proper use of it, along with its associated tripod. This showed the correct way to fix the camera to the tripod, as well as how to operate its numerous functions. During this session we were all made aware of the danger of using the tripod with spikes out on the blue screen floor.

Harsholme Country Park

When shooting on location at Harsholme Country Park, we ensured that we were ever vigilant of the camera, and making sure it was kept securely bagged up when not in use. We also used the tripod, with the spikes out so that it remained stable in the soft ground. Aside from these minor issues, the park was a relatively safe environment, although occasionally rain threatened to hamper our filming efforts.

Town Centre

As with filming at Harstholme country park, we ensured the camera was secured and bagged up when not in use and that we filmed in areas that were not too densely populated.
